DR. J. G. CARROLL,

MRS. CLEVELAND PACKS UP

PREPARING FOR THE DEPARTURE FROM THE WHITE HOUSE.

The Ex-President Has Grown Backgammon and Thinks He Is an Even Match for Uncle Sam—Mrs. Cleveland Is Somewhat Worried at the Approach of Separation—Ladies' Calls—Other Social Events.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 1.—[Special.]—The Post today had a talk with Mrs. Cleveland about her future.

"I have been busy," said she in the softest tones, referring to the packing of her dresses and bric-a-brac. "By next week we shall be quite settled in our new home. All the heavy work of packing has been done already, and to-morrow will see the end of it. I suppose," said she with a merry laugh, "I had better try to look as disconsolate as I can, so that people will not think we are quietly settling down again."

"It has been a pleasure," said that matchless, "that you are about to settle a fixed point in your White House experiences."

"I don't see. I never thought of such a thing. It would hardly be in good taste, and then I am not history and do not aspire to be. I have had a pleasant and happy life in the White House, and hope to remain for the coming two years. But I don't think that you [illegible] again. I have always had a fondness for country and for a home where I could, but I have not the common idea of spending myself in luxurious or lavish expenditure, and I am not sure that I shall not be more happy in a smaller house."

"Who will be your choice for the coming Democratic nominee?"

"I am waiting to influence Mr. Cleveland in any way to get to the front. I want to see him quiet, where he can enjoy the pleasures of home, which he has earned. I would like to see him President again, but I do not want to see Mrs. Cleveland in the White House. Everyone has followed me [illegible] enough. I want to see Mr. Cleveland in the quiet of his home. [illegible] will be the power of Mrs. Cleveland. She will accompany us to New York, of course, and the question of the future will be settled. [illegible] Democratic, we shall live in New York."

Mrs. Cleveland showed informally the many evening and the interview was brought to an end.

Mrs. Cleveland has expressed herself freely to friends regarding the present calls of the White House. I went to see her again.

Mrs. Cleveland is receiving the prominent ladies who [illegible] to see her again.

Mrs. Cleveland has not entirely recovered from the effects of the grippe, and is not receiving [illegible] of a position that will entail standing for any length of time.

Mrs. Cleveland does not anticipate beginning to [illegible] Washington until [illegible] Mrs. Cleveland's return. She thinks it quite time to [illegible] Mrs. Cleveland and her family now. All the heavy work of packing has been done already, and to-morrow will see the end of it. I suppose," said she with a merry laugh, "I had better try to look as disconsolate as I can, so that people will not think we are quietly settling down again."

FOR

SPANISH, FRENCH, AND GERMAN.

By Eugene Garthwait, A. M., Professor of the University, Paris, and Principal of the Cosmopolitan School, New York.

The method is on the principle that adults learn a foreign tongue in a foreign land, when surrounded by those who speak only the foreign language, and who converse and correspond exclusively in that tongue. Pupils are supplied from the first, oral and written exercises and conversation on that form of life to which they are accustomed, and are led to use the language acquired.
